

Abstract of the Disclosure

A device useful in diagnostic or surgical procedures for sealing the cervical canal in which an inflatable device is used with a hysteroscope instrument. The inflatable device provides a seal between an outer surface of the hysteroscope instrument and the 5 cervical canal, thereby preventing fluids from exiting the cervical canal.